TOTTENHAM is gearing up for its first winter festival this weekend.

Venues from Bruce Castle to the Arc Barge will be buzzing with live entertainment from tomorrow until Sunday, while Tottenham Green will play host to a two-day Winter Market.

The fun gets underway tomorrow with a showcase of talent at Tottenham Chances at 399 High Road, Tottenham, from 7pm.

There will be more dancing on Friday on The Arc, Barge Belle, 11 Hale Wharf, Ferry Lane, with an Electro Swing Club from 7pm to 11pm.

And there will also be an afternoon of folk music taking place at Bruce Castle Museum earlier in the day.

The Tottenham Winter Festival then gets underway in earnest from noon on Saturday alongside the market, with food and crafts for sale as well as numerous performances, culminating in the Christmas lights switch-on at 6pm

The market also runs from 1pm to 5pm on Sunday. Councillor Alan Strickland, Haringey Council's cabinet member for economic development and social inclusion, said: "Tottenham is going to be overflowing with talent and fun for the Winter Festival.

"I hope that hundreds of residents will come along to enjoy the events and kick off the countdown to Christmas.

"Bringing activities to Tottenham Green was one of the council's 12 'in 2012' pledges for Tottenham, and I am really looking forward to rounding off a great year of progress with the Tottenham Winter

Chief executive quits Barnet and Chase Farm after only 18 months in job... By Koos Couvée

STAFF at Chase Farm have been left feeling "insecure" after the hospital's chief executive resigned on Friday after only 18 months in the job.

Twitter @NrthLondonNews

The departure of Mark Easton from the top job at Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust is shrouded in mystery and comes as plans to merge with the Royal Free in Hampstead have been submitted to NHS London.

Critics have said the hospital, which is undergoing a huge reorganisation programme, needs more stability or patient care could suffer.

Chase Farm is due to lose its 24-hour accident and emergency department of Nursing, which represents the next year, with the maternity unit scheduled to follow suit some time after.

Mr Easton's move comes just days after the trust, based in The Ridgeway, Enfield, announced it was axeing 150 administrative jobs in a bid to cut costs.

And unions say staff morale has been affected by the changes.

Mr Easton, right, who was previously chief executive at the Brent and Harrow primary care trusts, and interim director of strategy at NHS London, is being replaced by Mary Joseet, director of planning, performance and partnership, who will act as CEO until the alternative arrangements are made.

A spokeswoman for the Royal College hospital's nurses, said: "With the implementation of the Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Clinical Strategy, the proposed acquisition by the Royal Free and the challenging cost improvement programme, staff are feeling very insecure at the moment and this has had a negative impact on morale."

Alev Cazimoglu, chairwoman of Enfield Council's health and wellbeing scrutiny panel, added: "This constant change is not good for Chase Farm, but perhaps we can take this opportunity to get a CEO who will support keeping our A&E so that we can have a local hospital providing the care that the case in spring 2013.

NHS trust bosses on the move

By Koos Couvée

NORTH Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust appointed a new chief executive on Friday.

Julie Lowe, chief executive at Ealing Hospital NHS Trust since May 2007, will be taking over from acting chief executive Lance McCarthy.

Mr McCarthy had been in charge since the departure of former chief executive Clare Panniker, who was appointed as head of the Basildon and Thurrock University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust in May.

Before her Ealing post, Ms Lowe was deputy chief executive of the East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust, where she was part of the team in charge of opening the new Hertford County Hospital and developing cancer services at Mount Vernon Hospital in Northwood.

Welcoming the appointment, David Hooper, chairman of the trust, said: "Julie has a wealth of acute sector experience and a track record in delivering results.

"She has managed hospitals with a similar population base as ours and her innovative ways of working with partner organisations and community groups to improve health outcomes will no doubt benefit the health of the local people we serve across Enfield and Haringey

"The North Middlesex is an ambitious, forward-looking trust.

"We are improving facilities and services across the board thanks to the implementation of Barnet, Enfield Haringey Clinical Strategy.

"Our financial strength and the high quality care and we provide experience to patients puts us in an excellent position to pursue foundation trust status as a stand-alone organisation. "I believe Julie has the right experience to lead the North Middlesex during these exciting times and will help the organisation innovate and develop to meet the needs of our expanding population base.

Ms Lowe, pictured, added: "I am delighted to be joining the team at the North Middlesex.

"The organisation has come a long way over the past few years, with an excellent record of improvement in finance and performance, and

I look forward to working with the dedicated staff to help the trust reach its full potential.' Ms Lowe will take up her new role Splash the cash!

Arm yourself with a tenner and help campaigners boost local stores on an organised shopping spree

THE shock cash mobs that have swept the borough in recent weeks will end with a bang tomorrow when campaigners swoop on five shops.

The phenomenon, which has seen groups of shop-pers descending on independent shops over the past two months, is the brainchild of Enfield entrepreneur Karen Mercer, who has been on a crusade to bring Enfield's high streets back to life.

Since October she has rounded up keen shoppers via social networking sites Facebook and Twitter and has led the charge on independently-owned shops, only revealing the exact location of the target store at

Karen wants as many people as possible to meet her outside Winchmore Hill station tomorrow

Ably assisted by five fellow shoppers, Karen is hoping scores of people will flash their cash in five different shops in Winchmore Hill at exactly the same time, armed with nothing more than the purchasing power of their £10 notes.

Revealing her excitement at the latest twist in the cash mob tale, the businesswoman, who runs My Coffee Stop on platform 1 of Enfield Chase railway station, told the Advertiser: "It boosts the local economy.

"Every pound that you spend locally is more likely to be spent in another local shop.

Previously the cash mobs have visited Ma Battley's Sweet Emporium, in Church Street, Enfield, The Village Wholefood Store, in Forty Hill, Enfield, and Holtwhites Bakery, in Chase Side, Enfield.

Karen added: "The problem with the high street is Waiting game: The treetop adventure course in Trent Park

Go Ape! in limbo after planning verdict deferred

By Ruth McKee

THE future of Go Ape! treetop adventure course in Trent Park has been left hanging in the balance yet again after the council delayed a vital planning decision until next month.

Enfield Council's planning committee was due to decide whether to grant permission to develop the site – an issue which has divided park users since its launch last spring – once and for all on Monday night.

The Go Ape! company is seeking retrospective planning permission because of errors with the first application.

But after pressure from campaign groups concerned about flaws in the public consultation process the decision was put off until next month.

According to Christine Callaghan, who opposes the scheme, the council was forced into the delay after the campaigners said important mistakes had been made – and as a result the public consultation period was extended.

"We keep pointing out to the council that, as regards informing the public about planning consultation, they keep doing it wrong," Miss Callaghan told the Advertiser.

"Even planning notices – the council hadn't put them up properly.".

She was adamant that the delays were down to the lack of proper consultation on the part of the council and the irregularities only came to light

A decision on judicia initial application should be reached next month.

after pressure from eagle-eyed campaigners.

"But really, it's not for us to police what the ouncil does," she added.

Ben Davies, business development manager of Go Ape!, admitted he thought the waiting would be over by now – but stressed that he welcomed the opportunity to make sure the process was completed correctly.

"We support the council, they have got to get it right," he said. "We support them in making sure everybody is properly consulted.

Mr Davies denied that the constant delays,

Mr Davies denied that the constant delays, demands and controversies had deterred the company from operating in Trent Park.

"We are committed to Trent Park and we are committed to making it the best park it can be," he added.

"We have created jobs there and the customer feedback we've had has been fantastic."

A council spokeswoman told the Advertiser: "The planning application is currently subject to a consultation exercise and therefore there was no intention to report the application to November committee as all representations have yet to be received.

"It is anticipated that the application will be reported to the December 18 planning committee meeting."

A decision on judicial review into whether the initial application should be allowed to stand will be reached next month

Park users seeing red over green paths plan

By Ruth McKee

PLANS to build an accessible walking and cycling track through some of Enfield's parks have met with fury among some residents.

Campaigners say the meadow in Forty Hill Park, Enfield, will be damaged if the London Greenways network is allowed to go ahead

As the Advertiser reported earlier this month, the plan to build the cycle route, which is aimed at encouraging Londoners to get active in the wake of the 2012 Olympics and Paralympics, has already angered users of Hilly Fields in the north of the borough.

The Greenway is intended to open up access to parks throughout the capital and will be made of a stable surface known as Hoggin, a compacted mix of gravel, clay and sand.

It is considered ideal for cyclists, walkers and wheelchair users

The path is due go through parkland around Forty Hall, in Bulls Cross, but campaigners say the Hoggin material will damage the biodiversity and health of the land as not enough water or light will be able to penetrate the soil.

They claim that trees and rare plants will die from a lack of vital nutrients as a result

One of the campaigners, Jill Simpson, told the Advertiser: "The Greenway has been given the go-ahead regardless of local opposition – the council has been jeopardise the health of the park determined to put this through.

"But it will have a detrimental effect on mature trees because it is so thick with compressed layers. It will almost be like concrete.

"If water doesn't get through the path and saturate the roots of the trees, they die - simple as that."

The campaigners are also angry there has not been enough public consultation carried out about the temporary road needed to construct the Greenway.

Enfield Council has refuted allegation that the material

Cabinet member for the environment Chris Bond said: "Our Greenways are shared routes for pedestrians, cyclists and wheelchair users connecting people to woodlands, watercourses, parks and open spaces in a safe environment.

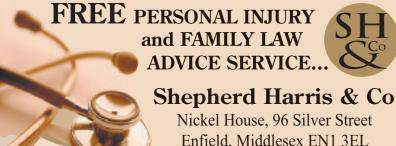

"I'd like to reassure people that the new Greenway will be attractive and low-key and blend into the surroundings.

"It will also improve access to the beautiful Hilly Fields park and enable more people, who cannot normally access these areas, to enjoy the beautiful scenery there.'

Youth jobs gets down

By Koos Couvée

DAVID Miliband attended a summit last week aimed at tackling youth unemployment in north London.

The Labour MP and former Foreign Secretary was among a group of politicians who met for the North London Youth Jobs Summit, a scheme devised by Del Goddard, Enfield Council's cabinet member for business and regeneration.

Mr Miliband chaired a panel discussing ways of improving the employment prospects for those aged

In Enfield, the rate of unemployment for those aged 18 to 24 is 10.1 per cent, compared to 6.9 per cent in London.

Tottenham MP David Lammy, Chris Robbins, the leader of Waltham Forest Council, and Jonathan Portes, an economist at the National Institute Of Economic and Social Research, joined Mr Goddard on the panel. The summit was held at Tottenham Town Hall on Thursday and was attended by employers and voluntary sector workers from across six north and east London boroughs.

Mr Goddard said he wanted to pool ideas and resources in a bid to tackle a problem which is not confined to Enfield.

He said: "Our experience in Enfield as well as the rest of north and east London is that despite a national improvement in employment, we have a situation in which young people are increasingly unable to find work, including those qualified young people leaving college and university.

"This shouldn't just be an Enfield initiative as people live and work in different boroughs.

"We need a more locally coordinated and sub-regional approach in which we pool together resources, use of staff, grants and systems. Enfield gains from being part of this sub-regional arrangement."

Mr Miliband told the summit: "We have a serious problem with seven to eight per cent of young people who are permanently unemployed, both in times of boom and times of bust.

"One of the things we need to improve is the transition from school to work for those who do not go to university.'

Mr Goddard added: "The increasing casualisation of labour means so many young people are going through a revolving door, stuck on zero-hour contracts without developing their skills.

"This is a uniquely British problem. One of the things coming out of Europe is the emphasis on sustainable apprenticeships, which looks at Enfield, along with the Thurrock Council, in Essex, is part of JobTown, an EU initiative aimed at tackling youth unemployment through long-term apprenticeships.

Alan Sitkin, chairman of Enfield's environmental scrutiny panel, emphasised the role local government can play in job creation. "We don't get enough any more in tax

"We don't get enough any more in tax revenues for the state to create jobs, so you need the state to engage with the private sector," he told the summit.

"But most local authorities have a hands-off approach when it comes to dealing with the private sector.

"We have inherited a situation of short-termist economic thinking, in which big companies make quick profits that are expatriated out of the borough, without any benefit to local people.

"We are looking at ways in which, for instance, council procurement can force companies to invest more into employing the local workforce.

"Initiatives like the Green Deal and the Decent Homes programme could be used to provide jobs for many more young people in the borough."

A large number of job opportunities are expected to open up in the borough in early 2013 as council regeneration projects at the Alma estate in Ponders End and the Ladderswood Estate in New Southgate are nearing planning approval.

COMMENT

Keep it local and it may last longer

THE recession is eating high streets alive, while we flee en masse to out-of-town shopping centres with their ample parking and late opening.

And we lament the passing of family-owned shops with a sigh but tell ourselves we could never had given that shop our custom – where would we park for a start? How could we get there during working hours? Why should we pay more for something that is cheaper five minutes up the motorway?

But Karen Mercer has the right idea – if we are sad about the passing of our high streets, we have to do something about it.

We do get the high street we deserve and, like anything, the more we put in, the more we will get out of it. And we might even end up with high streets decorated with independent thriving shops rather than sad empty boarded-up shop fronts that tell the world we just don't care.

Think of the future

WITH ten per cent of Enfield's young people claiming Jobseeker's Allowance and the economy showing no sign of improving, prospects for many youngsters are rather bleak.

One is left wondering if career politicians like David Miliband, who went to Oxford and has never worked outside politics, know the reality of so many of our young Londoners stuck on zero-hour contracts, or without a job altogether. Are politicians willing to address the more fundamental problem?

At last week's summit, David Lammy rightly pointed to the industrial decline of the Lea Valley region ever since the Thatcher days.

Britain has since turned into a services industry and has lost its manufacturing base, while allowing big companies to make huge profits without giving back to the community.

The government needs to abandon its laissez-faire attitude and hold companies to their responsibility to provide apprenticeships, jobs and futures for our young people.

Privatising NHS is not way to make it better | A tribute to

I THINK we have got to start making up our minds on what we want with regard to our NHS, our health in the future and that of our children and grandchildren in years to come.

You may think we have no choice because of the introduction of the Health and Social Care Bill.

Private companies, some never involved with healthcare before, are coming forward to run services under the logo of the NHS.

They hope to make profits from doing this, or why else would they be trying to infiltrate the NHS provision in running hospitals, urgent care Farm patients.

Private construction companies have already and are still making huge profits from the public purse in the form of private finance initiative loans, which have led us into so much trouble on the loans we can't afford now, or in the continuing 30 years of payback.

Both North Middlesex Hospital and Barnet Hospital are on their second round of wanting even more PFI funding to provide major services to accommodate Chase

If we want to keep our NHS as publicly provided health services to benefit everyone, some more sick than others, we do need to ask our doctors to refer us to the true NHS providers as opposed to those run or owned by the private sector.

ENFIELD'S schools and educational service wishes to enlarge George Spicer Primary School, pictured.

They glibly said that there was "currently a range of users with access rights to the site which will be changed through the development".

What they did not say is that it is proposed to put a car park on allotments and open green space and replace the allotments with land from a garden which is home to a variety of trees which provide habitat for bats. The plans also said that "parents' drop-off is to be formalised".

Sketty Road already experiences traffic problems in the mornings and afternoons with the existing school.

with two schools on the road and many parents trying to drop their offspring off at one school, then the other? What the plans also do not say is the council is considering extending this congestion into Ladysmith Road by demolishing the gates to Enfield Playing Fields, increasing access to two lanes and installing a hard-surfaced public car park.

I would urge the people who care about their green spaces to oppose these plans before Enfield's children have no more green spaces left.

Too many fireworks

NIGHT falls and the sky lights up with a kaleidoscope of

We cannot leave Jed alone during fireworks or he would be very destructive in blind panic. He broke his tooth biting the metal pipe of the hoover one year.

Why can't people restrict their fireworks celebrations

Consequences of theft

NOT for the first time, my husband's van has been broken into and the tools of his trade stolen. Yes, the police have been notified and yes, he is insured, but people don't realise the knock-on effect this has. The damage to the van has to be repaired and there is an excess to pay. The stolen tools and materials have to be replaced with another excess to be paid.

And while the van is off the road, he cannot earn the money he needs to replace the tools.

If you come across cheap tools or materials for sale, and if you have a conscience, not only will you say no, but please also report the person to the police. Chris Mollov

our pal Alfie

ON Saturday November 17, close school friends of the late Alfie Perrin, right, gathered in a house in Vicars Close to pay tribute to his memory.

We each received a card, and on it, wrote a personal message about Alfie. We attached these with ribbon to around 30 Chinese lanterns and let them off into the night's sky.

The mood was saddened, but the send-off was perfect. The Chinese lanterns filled the sky with a bright orange glow as we stood watching, arm in arm, remembering the memory of a great friend and a truly amazing person.

Alfie will be sadly missed but never forgotten, and our deepest thoughts go out to his family.

Worried about Green's future

I WELCOME the comments of MP Nick de Bois (Advertiser, November 14). He upholds rightly that the council and councillors should listen to and respect the views of residents.

I would, however, like to clarify that Chase Green in Chase Side is not a park – as Mr de Bois names it - but a registered village green under the Commons Registration Act 1965.

There are rules about how a registered green can be used.

This makes it so much the more disturbing that Enfield Council has applied for an entertainment licence (new premises licence) for events on Chase Green, which, apart from nuisance problems to residents and other users, could cause damage and contravene these rules.

Vegetation works at station halted

Residents unhappy about consultation letter

By Koos Couvée

NETWORK Rail has had to halt works around Winchmore Hill railway station following complaints from residents.

The rail operator informed people living near the station on Thursday November 15 about the work, including cutting down trees and foliage close to the overhead wires and the track.

But residents got in touch with Enfield Southgate MP David Burrowes, complaining that the company's letter was not clear about the exact details and location of the works and gave little notice as the work was scheduled to start the following Monday.

Mr Burrowes spoke to senior managers at Network Rail on November 16 and called for a halt to the works. Later that day Mr Burrowes received an apology for the lack of consultation with residents.

The Conservative MP said: "In Winchmore Hill and Grange Park there has been a history of broken promises by Network Rail.
"This is the third time vegetation management works were done without proper consultation.

"I have raised the issue in the Commons before and in meetings with ministers and senior officers at Network Rail, and received assurances they had learned their lessons.

"We now know that the council had not been notified and that no impact assessment on trees around the site had been made.

"Thankfully, senior managers at Network Rail responded promptly to my complaint and recog-

"The bottom line is that we expect Network Rail to be a good neighbour."

A spokeswoman for Network Rail said: "The work we planned to do was cutting back and trimming vegetation to stop it coming into contact with the overhead wires.

"As soon as we became aware that enough notice had not been given, we stopped the work. We are reviewing what happened to improve how we communicate with local people."

Burrowes confuses PM with his 'tache

Charitable MP sporting facial hair for Movember

By Ruth McKee

PROVING that it is possible to taken seriously as a politician while sporting a moustache, Enfield Southgate MP David Burrowes has been politicking as normal despite a new furry prominence on his top lip.

The Conservative politician has been growing the distinctive facial hair since the start of this month in aid of charity fundraising project Movember. Men taking part in Movember get sponsored to grow moustaches throughout the month to raise money and awareness for men's health issues – specifically prostate and testicular cancer.

"The female members of my family aren't great fans of it, neither my wife nor my daughters," he admitted to the Advertiser, adding that their dislike stems from both tickly kisses and the moustache's

But the dad-of-six added:

In fact, the 'tache has attracted praise from the top ranks of the Conservative Party, with Prime Minister David Cameron telling the newly hirsute MP that he was so excited by the flourishing facial hair that he had "forgotten his question", during the PM's EU statement made in the House of Commons on Monday.

Mr Burrowes has received a donation of £10 from Andrew Mitchell, the ex-chief whip embroiled in a row over dismissing police officers guarding Downing Street as "plebs".

The MP teamed up with some of his Southgate neighbours, who have dubbed themselves the Hairy Oaks, after the street they live in. The ten-strong team has managed to raise more than £2,000 in aid of prostate cancer with Mr Burrowes raising £320 himself.

THREE Enfield DVD firms are joining forces with Sony to mount a joint legal claim against the police after their stock was destroyed during last year's riots.

In one of the biggest legal battles over the disturbances that hit Enfield and other parts of the country in August 2011, Clear Vision, Lace International and Asphyxiation Films took the Met Police to the High Court last month.

The firms are aiming to recover at least £1.5million in compensation after their stock was destroyed in the fire at the Sony Distribution Centre, in Solar Way, Enfield Lock.

the fire at the Sony Distribution Centre, in Solar Way, Enfield Lock. Under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886, police authorities are liable for damages caused to property during riots.

To claim under the act, there must be evidence of more than 12 people being "riotously and tumultuously assembled".

Police have rejected claims by companies that kept stock in the warehouse. They argue the fire was a result of organised crime.

The DVD firms had previously launched a claim on their own. However, at a High Court hearing last week, judge Sir Christopher Clarke recommended that the firms team up with Sony, which is claiming for £60m of compensation, and Japanese insurance firms Mitsu Sumitomo and Tokio Marine Europe – and the judge approved a formal court order to merge the two cases.

Ian Allen, owner of Clear Vision, said: "I think if a number of companies come together, it does make a stronger a case. That said, I can't say I am confident as I have no idea what is going to happen."

Lawrence Abramson, a solicitor representing the DVD companies, told the Advertiser: "The police served their defence in which they argued that what happened at the Sony warehouse did not amount to a riot. The claimants think that it is obvious that the damage to the warehouse was caused by riotous behaviour. I suppose the police are persisting with their defence as there is a lot of money at stake."

According to the police, they are rejecting the claims on the grounds that they do not meet the legal definition for compensation payable under the Riot Damages Act.

A trial date has been set for May 1 2013 at the commercial court of the High Court.

Students moved to tears by horror

Reporter Koos Couvée joins a group of schools on an eye-opening trip to Poland

STUDENTS from Enfield were given the opportunity to reflect on the Holocaust's worst excesses during a trip to Auschwitz, where more than one million people met their death at the hands of the Nazis.

On a Lessons From Auschwitz trip, organised by the Holocaust Educational Trust, pupils and teachers from all over north London, including Edmonton County School, Enfield County School, the Oasis Academy Hadley and Enfield Grammar School, flew to Poland to visit the site of one of the worst genocides the world has ever seen.

I had the opportunity to join them.

The Nazis established their largest and most infamous extermination camp, Auschwitz-Birkenau, during World War II in 1940 at an army barracks near the town of Oswiecim, around 60 kilometres from Krakow in the south of the country.

The camp, which had excellent railway connections due to the heavy industry in the surrounding area, was initially established to hold Polish prisoners following the Nazi invasion in 1939.

It was later used to house Soviet prisoners of war, homosexuals and Roma gypsies, and by 1942 it had become the largest extermination camp for Jewish people, with those who had been deported coming from all over Europe. It is estimated that between 1.1 and 1.5million people were killed at Auschwitz, 90 per cent of

The first port of call on the trip is the Jewish cemetery in Oswiecim, a town whose population was 60 per cent Jewish before the Nazi invasion.

Our guide, history teacher Jeremy Quatermain, from Norwich, Norfolk, tells a group of students that the last Jewish person left in the town, the reclusive Shimshom Klueger, died in 2000 and is buried there.

Fresh paint on the walls of the cemetery reminds us that anti-Semitism has not disappeared – swastikas sprayed on to the walls by neo-Nazis have been covered over.

Mr Quatermain tells the pupils of the roles of victims, bystanders and perpetrators during the Holocaust and asks who, apart from the Nazis, bears responsibility for the genocide.

He reminds the students that many Europeans benefited from the disappearance of the Jewish population - their businesses, homes and other possessions often simply changing hands.

He also points to what philosopher Hannah Arendt called "the banality of evil" – the idea that genocide is not necessarily carried out by psychopaths, but rather the result of an acceptance of Nazi ideology by ordinary people. Camp commander Rudolf Hoess, for instance, lived at Auschwitz in a villa with his wife and five children and was said to be a loving family man, while at the same time developing an increasingly efficient killing centre.

Following the Nuremberg Trials, Hoess was hanged in 1947. Visiting the main camp, I was struck by the systemic nature of this genocide and the efficiency with which the Nazis carried out their "project".

Not only did they ruthlessly exploit the labour of those they did not kill immediately, but they also looted the belongings the prisoners brought with them, ripped out gold teeth from victims of the gas chambers and shaved off their hair for textile production.

A huge pile of this hair is on display in the camp, a sight that brings some pupils to tears.

Aicha Konde, 17, a Year 13 student at Enfield County School, in Holly Walk, Enfield, said: "The one day that I thought I would be able to

Our final destination before flying back to London is Auschwitz II, also known as Birkenau, located just two miles away from the main camp.

Birkenau was designated by SS leader Heinrich Himmler as the place of the "final solution of the Jewish question in Europe" – the main site where trains delivered people to the gas chambers from all over German-occupied Europe between 1942 and 1944.

The day is brought to an end by a candle lighting ceremony on the Birkenau railway track. Students listen quietly in the freezing cold as poems by survivors are read out.

Themis Loizou, 17, from Winchmore School, in Laburnum Grove, Winchmore Hill, said: "I found the camps very surreal, as if there was no life, no birds and no breeze. It was highly emotional and distressing, but it gave me hope as it shows that as a generation we are learning from the past and are hopefully preventing history from repeating itself."

The Holocaust Educational Trust, established in 1988 to educate young people about the Holocaust, is active in schools, universities and communities and provides teacher training, an outreach programme and educational materials. Visit www.het.org.uk for more information.

One final push needed in campaign to maintain constituency's identity to say a huge heartfelt thank you to every person who took the time to make their opposition known to the Boundary Commission regarding the ludicrous proposals to rip our community in two and create a new parliamentary constituency of Chingford and Edmonton.

At the end of last year, I looked to residents to join our campaign to "Save Edmonton".

I was overwhelmed by the support that we received. Hundreds of people signed campaign letters opposing the proposed constituency and more than 100 individual residents and community groups wrote detailed accounts of why joining with Chingford just wouldn't work.

I am delighted to say that the Boundary Commission listened to the wealth of evidence and objections presented to it.

That will also protect the integrity of the borough of Enfield from any future boundary review that sought to link parts of Edmonton with Haringey or any other borough.

This is a true victory for our community. It shows that if enough people shout loudly enough then their voices will be heard.

It also means that Edmonton will retain its identity and the people who live here won't have to share their MP with Chingford – an area geographically and socially miles apart from Edmonton. The fight isn't quite over yet though.

Once again, the new proposals are open to consultation and we have until December 10 to make our views known this time around.

I will be submitting a response broadly in favour of the new proposal and I would invite residents to do the same by visiting consultation. boundary commission for england. independent. gov.uk/ or writing to Boundary Commission for England, 35 Great Smith Street, London, SW1P 3BO.

Fraudster jailed for two years

By Mary McConnell

A FRAUDSTER who claimed more than £92,000 in benefits by pretending to be British has been jailed for two years.

Viorica Spirache, 44, of Rays Road, Edmonton, had been refused leave to remain in the UK, but she continued to claim tax credits. income support and housing and council tax – benefits to which only British nationals are entitled

Following investigations by HM Revenue & Customs and the credits fraud should be warned - we

it was discovered that Spirache had claimed £35,117 of tax credits and income support and housing and council tax benefits totalling £57,270 between September 2004 and February this year.

Spirache pleaded guilty to tax credits and benefit fraud and was sentenced to two years in prison when she appeared at Wood Green Crown Court last Wednesday.

HMRC spokesman Bob Gaiger said: "People who commit tax

Chase Farm clinic hails stalking law

By Koos Couvée

STAFF at a national centre in Enfield have welcomed new legislation which came into force on Sunday making stalking a specific criminal offence,

The change in the law comes after a pledge by Prime Minister David Cameron on International Women's Day in March.

It means stalking is a separate crime under the Protection of Freedoms Act 2012.

Previously, stalkers were convicted under harassment laws.

The introduction of the act raises the profile of the National Stalking Clinic, based at Chase Farm

Hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, by the police. We also require more the only one of its type in the world.

The clinic is part of the Barnet,
Enfield and Haringey NHS Mental Health Trust and acts as a specialist service for the assessment and treatment of stalkers and their victims.

Frank Farnham, consultant forensic psychiatrist and one of the founders of the NSC, said: "My colleagues and I at the National Stalking Clinic welcome the introduction of this new legislation as it will give stalking victims more confidence in the criminal justice system.

"Some 120,000 victims, mostly women, are stalked each year and just 53,000 are recorded as crimes training about stalking for police and prosecutors before convictions are obtained and for probation officers and offender managers after conviction about what interventions are most likely to prevent reoffending."

The NSC is an initiative of the North London Forensic Service, which assesses stalkers referred by other agencies, including the courts, police, probation service and the NHS.

The clinic provides preparation of assessment reports, provision of treatment programmes for stalkers, guidance on managing cases and the assessment and treatment of stalking victims.

Pan Asian restaurant inspired by folk story

Restaurant News

12 Crouch End Hill Crouch End Tel: 020 3667 5111

A NEW dining experience has landed in Crouch End.

The man behind Tootoomoo, which opened on Friday, wants to recreate the street food vibe found in Thailand, Singapore or Malaysia.

Philip McGinness has spent the past two years refining every last detail of his eatery, and he hopes Tootoomoo's Pan Asian cuisine will go down a storm, even in the competitive Crouch End market.

"Crouch End does have a village feel and it seems that everyone knows everyone else - it has got a nice community feel," he said.

"Everything we do is about that. We wanted to make it feel very casual. We ask people to take us for what we are.î

The name Tootoomoo comes from an Indonesian folk tale about a girl and a - and from January they will be offering added Philip. "We have brought in the giant - and children who visit the delivery. Philip said: "Outside of central best quality ingredients."

Fresh and funny look at tired romantic genre

TWO sparkling performances by Rafe Spall and Sally Hawkins are a couple of the many fine things about Nick Payne's new play Constellations.

After transferring from the Royal Court to the Duke Of York this month, Constellations is a fresh look at the tired old romance genre.

Payne's script sees two lovers meet at a barbecue over and over again - and there are tiny differences with each meeting, revealing the possibilities offered in many parallel universes. In one version the couple part and never see one another again, in another they form a relationship before that finally ends too - all the outcomes existing simultaneously. Constellations is a short play and the endlessly repeating scenes might have lost the audience along the way had the running time been any longer. Exploring the concept of time forking at every decision we make, free will and the meaning of our own mortality, the fresh, intelligent script is peppered with laughs that are fully realised by Spall as bee-keeper Roland and Hawkins as the scientist Marianne. Visually beautiful, the set is filled with white balloons representing string theory, the stars themselves, or perhaps just time running out. By turns funny and touching, this a play that moves the heart takes a pop at the National Trust for packaging up historical homes and serving them up on a platter to the public. People started enjoyably enough, Bennett's witty dialogue and sparkling characters getting things set up nicely. Dorothy Stacpoole is in a quandary over what to do with her crumbling country pile. Should she sell up to the National Trust, allowing them to renovate the old place but allowing countless members of the public to traipse through? She is also offered the chance to have the whole place bought up by a shadowy organisation which says it will pick the house up, brick by brick, and transport it from its Yorkshire home to Wiltshire.

During the second half the Stacpoole home is used as a set for a pornographic film, a plot development which felt rather contrived - just an excuse for some smutty gags involving a half-dressed actress and a bishop.

Although Bennett seemed to have a lot of criticism for the National Trust he never offered up any suggestions for what can be done for stately homes that have seen better days. His only solution appeared to Three peppy performances by Frances De La Tour, Linda Bassett and Selina Cadell, the ladies arguing over the best course of action for the Stacpoole home, were far and away the best things about this play. Not Bennett's finest.

ELCOME to the latest edition of Families In The Loop. And as you'll see, it has a distinctly Christmassy feel. The catalogues may have been coming through the door since August and mince pies on sale in the shops for weeks, but we reckon it's now time to turn our thoughts to everything festive.

So, in this special In The Loop, we're rounding up the best places to meet Santa, watch a pantomime, go ice skating and go for Christmas lunch if you can't be bothered to cook, as well as some present ideas for those difficult-to-buy-for friends and relatives.

What's more, we have a host of great competitions, including your chance to win family tickets to Walking With Dinosaurs - The Arena Spectacular, passes to meet Father Christmas at Willows Farm Village, some great Match Attax goodies, including an exclusive full set of either Arsenal or Tottenham Hotspur players, tickets to see The Gruffalo at artsdepot and a colonic irrigation session with Agua di agua.

We speak to a cake queen who has taken the first step towards her dream of running her own bakery. And, purely in the spirit of research, we've done the hard work for you and taste-tested a host of alternatives to Christmas cake in a bid to find the best thing to have with a cuppa if you don't like the traditional fare.

We've also dipped into a selection of celebrity autobiographies to find out what's hot and what's not.

Plus, there is the chance to win copies of Linda Nissen Samuels' fantastic book Draw Water And Other Things, which will prove to even the most reluctant artist that they do have a hidden creative side.

If you are hankering for the snow, we could have the solution, taking to the slopes at the Snow Centre - the closest white stuff to the centre of London.

Meanwhile, Lee Valley White Water Centre has a great offer if you are looking for a present for the thrillseeker in your life.

Something for everyone, then. So we hope that you enjoy everything we have in store and good luck - we'd love to hear your feedback by emailing families@nlhnews.co.uk

And then comes the excitement of Father meeting Christmas himself, who will give every child a golden key so they can enter his toy shop and choose any gift they see.

Children can also get their skates on for a turn on the Magical Ice Rink – and being synthetic, there will be no damp clothes or chilly

A visit to Willows wouldn't be complete without saying hello to their real family of reindeer - resting up before their big night on Christmas Eve - meeting their farmyard friends and going for a ride through the Festive Wood on Tristan the Runaway Tractor, enjoying some seasonal songs along the way.
We have teamed up with Willows to offer lucky readers the chance to win one of two free family admissions (two adults and two kids) to meet Santa and enjoy all that it has to offer this festive period.

snow globe
December 8 and 15
From 10am to 1pm and 2pm to 5pm on two consecutive Saturdays, children will have the chance to meet Santa in a special giant snow globe at The Spires shopping centre in Barnet. The winter wonderland experience will allow kids to have their photo taken with Father Christmas as the snow falls, and then they can also take home a chocolate treat. All of the pictures will be added to the centre's Facebook wall so they can be shared with friends and family.

The cost is £3 per person, £5 for two kids or £8 for a family, with all proceeds going to Cherry Lodge Cancer Care and Noah's Ark Children's Hospices.

Snow Mountain From December 10

Families visiting The Broadwalk Centre in Edgware will have the chance to step inside the mall's special Snow Mountain. For £8, up to four people can take a step through the giant wardrobe, take a seat on the sleigh with the Snow Queen and watch the snow fall. Included in the price is either a printed photograph or a DVD Santa Claus will be joining visitors from December 21-24 until he has to fly off and deliver presents across the world. If you spend £23 at the centre, you can show your receipts at the redemption desk and will be entitled to a £2 discount on your visit to Snow Mountain. Start your detox now with Get your a colonic irrigation session

T MAKES my eyes shine brighter - that's the opinion of Simon Cowell about colonic irrigation.
As we discovered in Secret Revenge:

The Intimate Life Of Simon Cowell, by Tom Bower, the multimillionaire television guru has undergone the treatment.

However, colonic irrigation certainly isn't just for the rich and famous, and for anyone wanting to start their detox now rather than waiting for the new year, it could be the perfect choice.

If you are feeling bloated, suffering from bad skin, constipated, lethargic or want to lose weight, then a session may well be the answer.

Colon hydrotherapy is an alternative health treatment that dates back as many as 3,000 years.

Today, Aqua di aqua, a specialist clinic in East Barnet Road, Barnet, is proud to offer the beneficial therapy. It uses state-of-the-art equipment to detox and cleanse while adhering to the highest standards in the field.

So, if you have been putting off that gym session or run due to your hectic lifestyle, this could be an ideal alternative to getting you back on track.

Sylvia Orsi, of Aqua di aqua, says that the treatment is popular with both men and women of all ages. And, with a consultation and a colonic irrigation treatment starting at £80, it is within people's reach.

However, we have teamed up with

Aqua di aqua to offer three lucky readers the chance to each win a colonic irrigation session.

To be in with a chance of winning, just answer the following question:

'It may be the kiddie slope, but in my mind I'm James Bond skiing brilliantly'

F YOU want a guaranteed white Christmas, there are few better ways of getting into the yuletide spirit than skiing down a snowy mountain.

But if your budget doesn't quite stretch to a trip to Courchevel, why not try the next best thing at the Snow Centre in Hempstead?

manoeuvre themselves do hill like newborn deer learni That's where I am headed.

It boasts a 160m slope covered in real snow (or at least snow that's made by a machine – I didn't see any delivery trucks with Swiss number plates when I was there).

I must admit, I was a little daunted by the invitation to give the Snow Centre a go myself

Apart from the cost and my aversion to puffy jackets, I have always been put of skiing by the sheer number of friends and family members who have sustained serious injuries.

And by serious I mean weeks in hospital, surgery and, in the case of my friend Phil, a year in a wheelchair and healthy payout from a reckless snowboarder's insurer.

But as I arrive at the foot of the Snow Centre's artificial slopes, I start to see the attraction.

To my left, skiers and snowboarders zoom down the remarkably realistic fake snow-covered mountain.

To my right, nervous beginners tentatively manoeuvre themselves down the kiddle hill like newborn deer learning how to ski.

Getting more confident: Daniel O'Brien skiing at the Snow Centre

I am taking part in a group beginners' session, and with the chances of brain damage fairly low at this point, my first fear is being the worst skier in the group.

fear is being the worst skier in the group. I don't mind being bad at something, but I hate being the worst.

Thankfully our instructor Richard – a friendly PE teacher type with a sergeant-major's moustache that I hope wasn't just for Movember – is patient and helpful, and as it turned out I'm not all that bad.

Even better, another member of the group is absolutely rubbish – she can barely stay upright for more than 30 seconds – and so my relatively minor mistakes go unridiculed.

After the moment of quiet relief that follows the realisation that I wasn't completely terrible at something, I start to have fun. A lot of fun.

As I glide/shuffle down the slope I might look as mobile as a snowman, but I feel like Eddie the Eagle.

My bends may resemble a lorry doing a six-point turn in a cul-de-sac, but in my head I'm James Bond in those films where he skis well. This may be the kiddie slope, but I feel like a man.

THIS is not a pantomime in the traditional sense. That's the warning from Chickenshed Theatre ahead of from Chickensneu meanits annual festive offering.

Reauty – Dream On

Sleeping Beauty – Dream On serves up the familiar tale of the princess who is sent into a long sleep after pricking her finger on a spinning wheel before being woken by a handsome prince.

However, the inclusive theatre company, based in Chase Side, Southgate, promises a fresh and funky version of the story.

Not a pantomime in the traditional sense, it is still a festive treat for anyone aged five and upwards. The cast will feature hundreds of Chickenshed members, joined by their all-ages community theatre groups.

What's more, the sets have been created by international designer Adrian P Smith, who has worked on films including Braveheart and also brought his creative talents to the National Theatre.

Performances take place from November 28 until January 12 with tickets costing £11-£20.

Christmas Tales

THE Tales from the Shed team will be bringing many of their favourite characters to life for a festive spectacular.

Aimed at children aged up to seven, the hour-long show is a mixture of silly songs, puppeteering, dancing and festive fun that will have youngsters bouncing in their seats - and even joining in with the cancan.

Last year's show was a sell-out, so early booking is advised for this year's offering, which will be at Chickenshed Theatre, in Chase Side, Southgate, and also "on tour" at the Disadel Control the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield.

Performances take place from December 5 to 22 and on December 29 with tickets £6 (under-ones free).

Mother Goose

MILLFIELD Theatre is promising a golden egg of a show as the Edmonton venue stages this family favourite. Gift ideas

The show at the Silver Street theatre tells the story of Mother Goose, who hits the jackpot when her feathered friend starts laying golden eggs.

However, things soon take a turn for the worse as she allows greed to get the better of her - leading to lots of laughs, mischief, sparkling costumes, heroes and villains along the way.

Mark Slowey, who was born a hop, skip and a fairy jump away from Millfield at North Middlesex Hospital, takes on the role of the dame in this festive eggs-travaganza, which runs from November 29 until January 5.

Tickets cost between £12.50 to £17.50, with deals for schools also available.

For more information about the show and performance times, as well as to book tickets, call the box office on 020 8807 6680.

The Gruffalo

IF you are looking for some monster entertainment this Christmas, head down to artsdepot for The Gruffalo.

Tall Stories are presenting the children's favourite at the venue in Tally Ho Corner, North Finchley, from December 8 to January 6 in an adaptation suitable for children aged three and above.

Based on Julia Donaldson's best-selling book, we follow Mouse as he ventures deep into the dark wood, encountering the wheeler-dealer Fox, an eccentric old

Owl and a maraca-shaking snake.
The cheeky chappie winds them up about the creature he imagined – The Gruffalo – before coming face to face with the mythical creature.

Songs, fun and laughs are all guaranteed.

How to make a traditional Dutch Christmas stol

A KERSTSTOL is a luxury bread that in The Netherlands is traditionally eaten at Christmas time. It is rich, sweet, studded with candied fruit peel and raisins and sprinkled with powdered white sugar. In the middle is a ribbon of creamy almond paste, which Dutch people refer to as 'stol.' If the almond paste is missing, it's just Christmas bread.

Ingredients:

1/2 cup of golden raisins

1/2 cup of candied peel (orange or lemon)

1/4 cup of orange juice 1/4 cup of hot milk

1/4 cup of sugar

1/2 teaspoon of salt

250 grams of butter, melted

Two teaspoons of active dry yeast 1/4 cup of hot water (not boiling)

Two-and-a-half cups of flour (bread flour or all-purpose to make it lighter)

One egg

1/2 teaspoon of lemon zest 1/8 teaspoon of cardamom

1/8 teaspoon of ginger powder 1/8 teaspoon of cinnamon

For the almond filling:

Small can of almond paste Two tablespoons of butter, melted Two tablespoons of powdered sugar

Combine the raisins and candied fruit and soak in the orange juice. Set aside. Mix the milk, the sugar, salt and the butter and set aside.

Sprinkle yeast into the warm water and stir to dissolve. Take a large bowl and add two cups of flour. Make a well in the centre and pour in the yeast, and mix it in. Add the milk mix, stir again and add the lemon zest and the egg. Stir or beat until fully mixed, then knead on a lightly floured counter for five or six minutes.

Drain the soaking raisins and candied peel and quickly squeeze them dry, then fold them into the dough. Add the spices. Knead the dough until the raisins, spices and candied peel are well distributed. Grease a bowl, place the dough inside, cover and leave for an hour until risen. Gently deflate the dough and pat into an oval shape. Place the dough on a floured surface with the short end towards you and make an indentation along the length of the dough, right in the middle. Now roll the almond paste into a tight roll almost the length of the dough. Lay the almond roll in the indentation and lift the left side of the dough over it. Make sure the dough doesn't meet the bottom half all the way: a significant shape of the stol is the bottom 'pouting lip' of the bread. Rest the dough on a lightly greased baking sheet, cover and let it proof for about 30 minutes.

The bake for 40 minutes on the middle rack of your oven for 40 minutes at 180 degrees Celsius. Reduce the heat to a 160 degrees. Brush the outside of the bread with butter and bake for another five minutes, do the same after another five minutes.

If the bread is browning too fast, cover it with some aluminium foil. Take the bread out of the oven and cool. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and slice.

Xenia is hoping to enjoy sweet taste of success

BAKING fanatic has taken the first step to running her own bakery a shop

Xenia Dines, 33, of Fotheringham Road, Enfield, has been "making cakes for a long time". However, it wasn't until recently when, spurred on by family and friends, she went on a course, got her food hygiene certificates, and now her goodies are on sale in Love 13 in Purch Will Dark. Bush Hill Park.

As befits the season, the shop in Queen Anne's Place – which offers a selection of unusual gifts and accessories – is selling Xenia's individual Christmas cakes for around £6.50 each.

The mum-of-one said: "They are very raditional fruit cakes, because they have got to last – they could be sitting in the shop for three weeks. They are very traditional and rich with lots of alcohol.

"They went in the shop last week and they have already taken a couple of orders. And have had enquiries about glutten-free and alcohol-free cakes.

"After Christmas I am hoping to do something for Valentine's Day and Easter. But I will also give the shop other stuff to keep it

When she's not baking, Xenia has an admin job for a political organisation in Finchley. And she is planning to approach some other coffee shops in Barnet about them taking her cakes. Xenia admits: "I would love to have my own bakery or my own shop. But in the current climate I'm not going to risk taking on a shop.

The devout foodie, who was born and bred in Enfield, adds: "My husband is my biggest fan. He is always putting pictures of my cakes up on Facebook and Twitter.

If I was going to make any cake it would have to be a traditional Victoria sponge... or maybe a lime jelly cheese cake

"He is very supportive, and looks after our little one at night while I am doing the cakes."

A Facebook page and Twitter feed dedicated to Xenia's cakes are in the pipeline, but in the meantime the proof of the pudding – or rather cake - is in the eating.

NEVER say that we Gannets don't do anything for you. As well as flapping around finding the best local eateries, we have selflessly taken on the task of finding a sweet solution for anyone who doesn't like Christmas cake.

We put five alternatives to the test, and here's what we thought:

Asda Extra Special triple chocolate yule log

From the Leith's School of Food and Wine, this was a veritable fest of chocolate, with chocolate butter cream inside chocolate Swiss roll, all covered in thick chocolate get the picture?

It was moist, very sweet and not at all artificial tasting. Certainly did the job for any chocoholic and was branded "nice but not outstanding", by our intrepid taste testers.

It was moist and not too heavy, with we Gannets deciding it may do a good job of filling a hole after you'd had a big Christmas dinner.

The crust was overcooked and it was said it tasted "more like a big brioche than a panettone'

Mr Kipling Rum and Raisin Slices with a caramel layer

Our least favourite, these were more like confectionery than a cake.

Sweet to the point of being sickly, the cake was disappointingly dry and the mixture of fruit cake and chocolate-topped caramel just didn't work.

Fox's Pudding – cranberry and orange flavour

A bit like an old-school steamed pudding, although you can also cook it in the microwave, this sponge pudding topped with fruit tasted "nicer the closer you get to the top – the bottom's a bit chalky". Ideal with custard or ice cream, this sweet dessert would make a decent change to Christmas pud.

And the winner?

After fierce debate it was the stollen which won us over.

This is less an autobiography and more a how-to manual for living life to the full, colonoscopy dramas and all.

Written in the style of a conversation to her 18-year-old self, the comicactress makes light of some of the most embarrassing moments of her life, which, if even half of her anecdotes are true, should have made her cringe-proof by now.

Although this is a hilarious mantra about living life in fear of what people think of you, a little more gossip from behind the scenes of Graham Norton and a little less of how much she loves her dog and how fine she is being single wouldn't have gone amiss.

The cynic in me suspects that will be left for another book.

OLYMPIC fever has kicked off all over again with a slew of Olympians telling their stories. But it is impossible to resist delving into the mind of an elite athlete to find out exactly what it takes to win not just one, but a bag of gold medals.

In the case of Victoria Pendleton we can see exactly what it takes - a lot of blood, even more sweat and many tears.

From the outset hers was a difficult journey. As she repeatedly tells the reader, she didn't have the traditional stocky muscle-bound frame of a sprinter, for a long time she was the only girl in the all-boys' club that was British cycling in the early 2000s, and her relationship with her male mentors was somewhat fraught, to say the least. And that's even before she begins her relationship with British cycling's performance analyst.

By the end there's a huge sense of relief as she prepares to move on to the chapter of her life – Strictly et al. RM

Wynchmore Property Services PLAYS 'SAFE'

Tenants in Enfield can rest easy knowing their money is 'SAFE' and sound, as Enfield based letting agent Wynchmore Property Services becomes the latest firm to join the SAFEAGENT campaign, aimed at raising awareness of the logo to look for, to denote where tenants' and landlords' money is protected by a Client Money Protection Scheme.

With over 1,200 lettings and managements agents now registered to use the logo, consumers should always look for the easily identifiable mark. SAFEagent follows a number of high profile media cases where unscrupulous lettings agents have absconded with tenant and landlord funds.

The logo has been launched FOR lettings agents BY letting agents with the aim of identifying agents in Client Money Protection Schemes and highlighting the risks of using "uninsured" agents.

Jeff Wynne, Director at Wynchmore Property Services says:

"We want every tenant and landlord that we welcome through our doors to have peace of mind when it comes to client money protection. And, this is exactly what we can reinforce now that we bare the SAFEagent logo.

The message to the consumer is simple - everyone looking to rent or let should ensure that they use a firm which is part of a client money protection insurance scheme* look for the SAFEagent logo.

Landlords and tenants often make decisions based on cost but it is important to ensure you ask your agent for details of the organisation they are regulated by and which client money protection scheme they are covered by.

All agents regulated by NALS, the Law Society, ARLA/ NAEA, and RICS maintain and operate designated client accounts where clients money is held completely separate from the operating funds of the firm. If the agent you are using cannot provide you with the assurance of knowing they are covered by a client money protection scheme, the question you need to ask is why not?"

SAFEagent is also backed by industry and consumer organisations such as Shelter, CAB, NUS, the British Property Federation, the Trading Standards Institute, the Council of Mortgage Lenders and The Property Ombudsman.

For more information on the SAFEagent campaign, please visit www.safeagents.co.uk.

Long may sun shine for jolly good Sport

By lain Dooley

ELIGIOUS I'm not, but I am a born-again motorist - in a good way, I might add.

The combination of wanting to better previous fuel consumption figures and the need to be extremely well behaved means that rather than dashing around as quickly as legally possible, I've been cruising, pootling and maintaining a mood of steadiness over the past 1,000 miles or so.

That may sound like a recipe for middle-lane snoozing, but I've been been arriving at my destinations far less stressed than before and often only a few minutes later than if I'd been trying a lot harder.

Although this A1 wears the Sport tag that delivers stiffer suspension as well as bigger wheels, it's been more than happy to play along.

The S tronic gearbox gives a lovely tall seventh gear, and although a sniff of throttle usually means a single downshift, for the most part it will hum along with around 2,000rpm on the rev counter at the legal limit.

If there's one further wish to be granted, it is for cruise control - but frankly that was an omission from the options list on my part rather than a fault of the car.

I've also been trying hard to keep the cabin de-cluttered, the only problem being it is rather good at swallowing it in the first place.

The front cupholders are almost always occupied, swiftly followed by the one in the driver's door. Even with a cup in there you can stuff crisp packets and parking tickets in the space behind it, and the packet of biscuits kept for use in an emergency has stayed untouched in the armrest cubby for several months.

Anything A4-shaped is an arm's length away in the pocket on the space underneath the boot floor has housed wellies and an umbrella without a problem.

I also like the look. Armchair experts have predicted the end of white as a fashionable colour for cars, but this A1 turns heads and makes me look back wistfully at it as I lock and walk away.

I've been extra good and treated it to a wash and proper spruce-up at the hands of someone who knows what they're doing. It positively zings when it is immaculately clean - and behaving myself on the road means it stays clean for longer too.

It looks a little plainer than a threedoor A1 with a bodykit installed, but sits nicely in the space between discreet and posh. A sporty coupé version would look the business.

This smallest Audi is tough as well. The parcel shelf attachments, often the first thing to fall off with heavy use, remain stubbornly in place, doing their job. All the buttons and switches go on operating with slickness and a robust feeling and the seats and their fabric trim shrug off numerous stains. It might not look like a family car, but it's fit for the job.

When I occasionally allow myself a bit of fun on a deserted road, it dives into bends with aplomb. It's also a pleasure to give the gearshift paddles a workout and the sports suspension comes into its own.

My time is almost up for the A1 and although it's a month away from riding off into the sunset, I'm already starting to miss it. There will be a replacement, but I can't help thinking I'll be wishing the A1 was still here.

- Audi A1 Sportback 1.4 TFSI Sport, £17,680 list, £20,085 as tested.
- Engine: 1.4-litre petrol producing 120bhp and 147lb.ft of torque.
- Transmission: Seven-speed dual clutch gearbox driving the front wheels.
- Performance: Top speed 126mph, 0-62mph in 9.0 seconds.
- Economy: 53.3mpg combined (official), 44.13mpg (this month).

DEFOE SHINES IN CRUCIAL VICTORY

By Dominique Stafford

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR will hope to build on their crucial victory over West Ham United when they welcome Liverpool to White Hart Lane tonight.

Spurs produced one of their best performances of the season to secure a 3-1 win at home to West Ham on Sunday which enabled them to climb above their London rivals into seventh place in the Premier League table.

Although Tottenham dominated from the start, they had to wait until just before the interval to finally take the lead through a stunning Jermain Defoe strike.

Gareth Bale added the second, before Defoe sealed the victory with his tenth goal of the season - meaning that Andy Carroll's late effort was scant consolation for the visitors.

"The first goal from Jermain was a moment of inspiration," said head coach Andre Villas-Boas. "It was absolutely fantastic. It's what we need at times, for an individual to step up, and Jermain did that. He is a great player in a great moment of form.

"The performance was outstanding, just what we needed, but that first goal was absolutely decisive in unlocking the game.
"We've been unfortunate in a couple of results recently, we've deserved better, and it was important for us to get back to winning ways. It was an important day for us and good preparation for the Liverpool game.'

Sunday's match also saw an excellent display from Clint Dempsey, who has struggled to make much of an impact at White Hart Lane since joining Spurs from Fulham on transfer deadline day.

The American international has failed to reproduce the form which made him such a success at Craven Cottage, but he believes that he is finally starting to settle in to the more central role which he is being asked to fill at Tottenham

"I've been frustrated with not really getting on the ball, getting into the game and impacting games," he said. "It was good to play a part in two of the goals and I was a little bit unlucky not to get one myself, hitting the bar.

ball. I'm better getting it on the halfturn and then facing my opponents, rather than always playing with my back to goal.

"I'm traditionally used to playing in a 4-4-2 system when I'm on the left, but 'It was a game I enjoyed because I I'm not really an out-and-out winger. I am a player that needs to get on the am someone who comes inside and I'm more like an attacking inside-left player." Dempsey added: "Being more central is good because you're in a position where you see more of the ball, but it's about getting on the ball and making the movements that's going to allow you to do that. I'm starting to do a bet-

"It's just about learning to play with this team. Every team is different, and there's a period of adjustment.

"I did not have a pre-season with them, or anybody, so I'm trying to play catch-up a little bit and trying to adjust to this team and the style that

Dawson ignoring speculation linking him with a move away from Tottenham

MICHAEL DAWSON insists that he is ignoring speculation linking him with a move away from Tottenham Hotspur in the January transfer window.

The central defender came close to joining Queens Park Rangers during the summer, and has been a peripheral figure at White Hart Lane so far this season - finally making his first league start of the campaign during

Sunday's 3-1 victory against West Ham United. And, with former Spurs boss Harry Redknapp having now taken charge at QPR, there are reports that he will make a move for Dawson once the transfer window opens.

However, the England international insists that he is not concerned by this and is simply concentrating on trying to secure a regular place in the Tottenham team.

"I'm at Tottenham, I'm playing my football and I played on Sunday," he said. "I love playing football and I want to be playing. There's no hiding that, and it's hard when you're not.

"Every player wants to play, not just me, and of course it's frustrating. But I'm someone who keeps my head down, works hard and when you're called upon you've got to go out there and perform - and I thought all 11 players performed well.

"It's a great feeling and great to get three points because these fans went through a hard week after losing the way we did against Arsenal, and it hurt the boys.

"We're back to winning ways in the Premier League, which we needed because we haven't been having the best of runs in recent weeks."
